

Health Hub on The Avenue

Where health, wellbeing, community and commerce thrive.

Corumbene's Health Hub on The Avenue is an exciting new step in a proud history of community care in the thriving Derwent Valley.

With the acquisition of two prominent buildings on The Avenue and the securing of state and government development grants, Corumbene is well into a $10m development of a landmark health and wellbeing centre and a showpiece of community care.

And the project needs foundation partners.

As a foundation primary health care partner, you will become part of the Corumbene family, enabling you to formulate and deliver health strategy with a trusted and established primary health care provider with strong links to the Derwent Valley community.

You will be able to customize your floorplan and fit-out to suit your business (subject to council and heritage requirements).

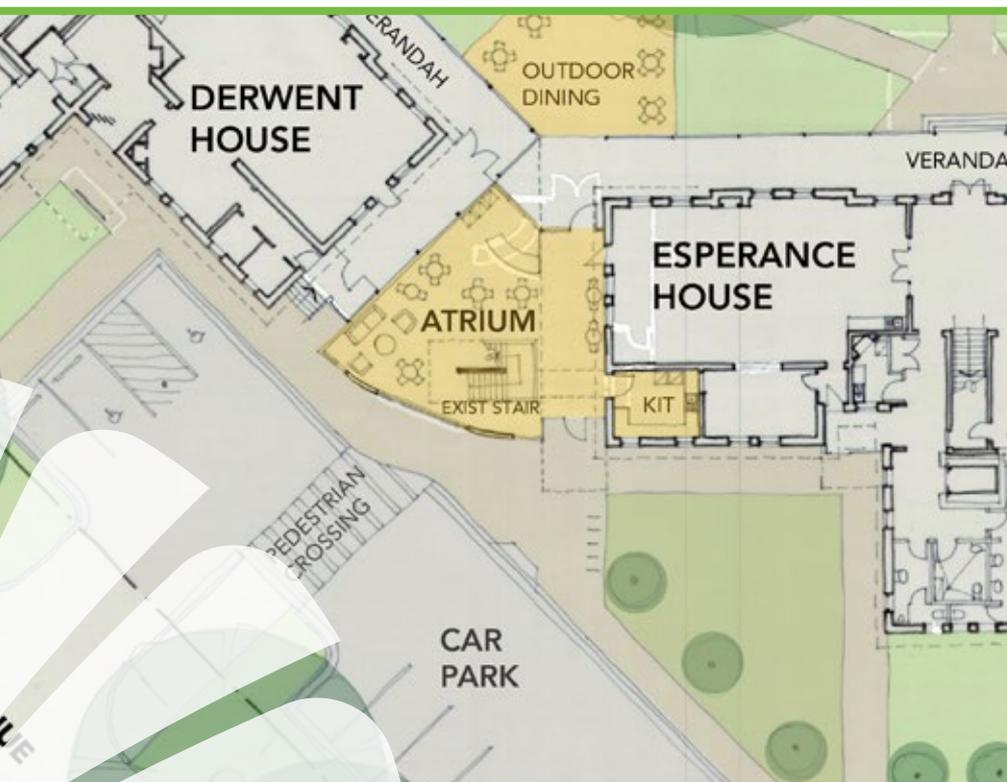

You will position yourself alongside a diverse range of health-related enterprises — including the University of Tasmania's new rural health teaching facility — and become part of a collaborative and holistic approach to primary health care.

The Avenue offers a picturesque, leafy streetscape within the historic Willow Court precinct, with close proximity to New Norfolk's town centre. The two thousand square metre site offers ground or first floor space, a shared meeting space and video conferencing facilities.

That's good health and good business sense.

A history of care and kindness.

Corumbene was founded in 1966 by a small group of industrious, community-minded volunteers who saw a need for improved care of the Derwent Valley's senior residents.

From there, Corumbene has grown from strength to strength, displaying unwavering commitment to our purpose: "to strengthen our community's health and wellbeing by delivering innovative, quality health and community services."

With dedication to our values of Teamwork, Respect, Encouragement, Honesty and Stewardship, Corumbene now has a broader community focus including a Rural Primary Health Program, community and in home services, retirement living and social housing.

Health Hub on The Avenue is the next chapter. Join the Corumbene story — our doors are open to you and at Corumbene, "every door leads to wellbeing".
